NO WILES FOR SUSIE

EVER SINCE THAT goodlooking boy had moved into their block, Doreen had been just dreadful, wearing her best clothes and giggling like a fool every time he went by. That's what Susie Blake was thinking as she hitched her own worn blue jeans up about her waist.

Susie and Doreen lived one house apart from each other and that good-looking boy...what was his name?...oh, yes, Ronald Willis...lived in the house between. Spang in the middle!

The scorn that Susie felt for Doreen was indescribable, really! From the way she acted, you'd think Doreen had never seen a boy before, honestly! Strolling out to the front yard, Susie kneeled down at the dog kennel she was trying to build and shook some nails out into a shallow dish so they'd be easier to pick up. A quick glance told her that Doreen, all in pink with matching hairribbons, was strolling idly down the block.

"She's hoping she'll meet him," Susie thought in disgust. "Really! Well, no one's going to catch me acting silly like that, going all gushy and gooey just because there's a new boy in the neighborhood! I'd rather die than act that way!"

She began to work industriously on the kennel, hammering the roof on while Spotty watched her. Ever so often, Susie stopped hammering to shake the pigtails out of her eyes and catch her breath. And look down the street!

Oh, Doreen was coming back now, carrying something from the grocer's. Just look at her, acting as though that little bag of stuff was too heavy! Honestly! For whose benefit was she behaving that way...as though Susie couldn't guess! That goodlooking boy was coming up the street right behind Doreen. Now she was letting him catch up with her!

"Oh, brother!" Susie muttered disdainfully as she saw Doreen hand the bag of groceries to Ronald with a fluttering smile. "She's giving him the helpless act! And he's falling for it! He's smiling right back at her. Gosh, he does look sort of nice! Well, I don't care! I don't care if he never notices me, if it means waving my eyelashes and flouncing around and giggling!"

She saw Ronald help Doreen right to the door of her house. They stood talking a while. "Wonder what they're talking about, not that I care! She could be asking him in for a chocolate milk..."

Quickly, Susie resumed her hammering as she saw Ronald smile, shake his head and walk away from Doreen towards his own house. "I'll just act as though I don't even see him!" she determined, raising the hammer and bringing it down...right on her thumb!

"Oh! Oh!" Susie shrieked.

He was at her side in an instant. "Hurt much?" he asked. "Here, let me see...no, it's not too bad." Still holding her hand, he went on sternly, "You girls! Don't know the first thing about handling a hammer and nails! Let me show you!"

Kneeling at his side, Susie found herself wishing she'd remembered to put more lipstick on. "You really know how!" she exclaimed admiringly.

"Gosh!" Ron looked at her. "You have long eyelashes!"

"Oh, they're not so wonderful," Susie said. Then...not feeling like a fool at all...she fluttered them! "Want a chocolate milk?" she asked.

"I DON'T CARE WHAT you say!" Judy blazed forth angrily. "You were not studying last night!"

"But, Judy-angel," Wilbur tried to argue, "just because you..."

"I saw you! Both of you, plain as day, just mooning about each other! Why, I passed both of you right on the street and you didn't even notice me!"

"But, Judy-doll," Wilbur protested, "I was studying with her brother and she happened to come along and..."

"Ha! Happened!" Judy was close to tears of jealous rage.

"Well, I'm about to happen to say we're finished, Mr. Wilbur Marsh! And I mean it! And if you don't believe me..."

Here, Judy did a desperate thing. Swiftly, she opened the clasp of the little charm bracelet Wilbur had given her for her last birthday. Then, her blue eyes flashing, she tossed the bracelet right out of the window!

"That's what I think of you and your...oh!" Judy gasped as she saw where her bracelet had landed. It had sailed out the window and right onto a junk-man's cart. At that very moment, her charm bracelet was on the way to the junk yard!

Wilbur's stricken face showed Judy what she had done. But defiantly, she snapped her fingers and said, "I don't care! So there!"

But Judy did care...very much. After Wilbur went away, her conscience began to sting and torment her. She had been unreasonable. And she'd lost Wilbur! Remorse drove her out of the house, speeding her feet to the junk yard. Twilight made it hard for Judy, but she searched, pleading with the junkman to help her. "You see," she explained, and now she was crying, "it means an awful lot to me! I want that bracelet back with all my heart!"

"Will you take it from... me?" Why, that was Wilbur speaking, holding out the bracelet and smiling forgiveness. Judy tried to speak but she was too choked up. Instead, she reached out for the bracelet.

Wilbur spoke first. "I never knew a junk yard was such a romantic place," he said.

Jim is a WINNER
in ALL SPORTS NOW.
YOU will be, too, soon.

COME ON, PAL, NOW YOU give me
10 PLEASANT MINUTES A DAY
IN YOUR OWN HOME like Jim did and I'll give YOU A NEW HE-MAN BODY
for your OLD SKELETON FRAME

NO! I don't care how skinny or flabby you are I'll make you OVER by the SAME method I turned myself from a wreck to the strongest of the strong.
Why can't I do for you what I did for MANY THOUSANDS of skinny fellows like You?

"Congratulations,
John! At last you
mailed the coupon
as EVERY MAN should. Soon You'll be as big and strong as I am,"
says Jim Norman
to John Luckus
